A New Swindling Scheme.-It seems that A New Swindling Scheme,—It seems that nen who are determined not to work, but live at the expense of others, have brains prolift; with swindling schemes whereby to increase their pecuniary possessions. We learn of another—a disgraceful act which occurred but lately. A man said to be red-faced, red whiskered, and pursy, with the air of a grandee, came to Philadelphia and obtained the services of about fifty Germans—who were far from being in even moderate circumstances. far from being in even moderate circumstances, far from being in even moderate circumstances, far from ont of work—to pluck peaches for and then out of work—to pluck peaches for him in his extensive orchards near Delaware City. ABOUT A HORSE.—Alfred Brogan, colored About a Horse.—Alfred Brogan, colored, bought a horse from one Frank Gunsenhauser for one hundred dollars, receiving a written guarantee that should any defect be found in the animal the money would be refunded. Alfred took the horse home, and while feeding him discovered that his jaw was affected to so great an extent as to prevent his eating—one side protruding. During the examination at the time of purchase the former owner had held the head in a proper position. Brogan, on the discovery of the defect, had the horse examined by a veterinary surgeon, and horse examined by a veterinary surgeon, and toe horse examined by a veterinary surgeon, and found one of his fore legs affected; and on informing the former owner of the fact, he (Gunsenhauser) rejused to pay back the money, saying he would exchange the horse. Alfred "could not see it," and as he could not get his money, he had Gunsenhauser arrested, Alderman Huriey bound him over in $600 bail to answer.

FOR SUMMER READING everybody is referred to the advertisement of Messrs. T. B. Peterson & Brothers in another column, where will be George W. M. Reynolds. This popular author has made a specialty of the scenes and characters peculiar to the Court of London, the "mysteries" of which he has vividly depicted in four different works. In addition to these novels, he has written much and ably on all the various phases of social life in the Old World, and his phases of social life in the Old World, and his numerous romances have attained a wide-spread and just celebrity. They are just the sort of literary productions which serve best to while away the time in such dull, hot weather as that which now afflicts humanity.

From an examination of the circulars and pamphlets distributed by the Washington Library Company, setting forth at length the welldigested plan adopted in order to secure the early endowment of the Riverside Institute, every one will at once become impressed and interested in their laudable and patriotic movement. The plan is one adopted in strict accordance with the terms of the charter as granted the Washington Library Company by the Legislature of this State. In view of this fact, as well as that the funds to be raised are for the benefit of the orphans of our deceased braves who fell in the late war, Commissioner Rollins at once consented to exempt the revenue thus derived from all taxes. It was also from the same motives that Messrs, George A. Cooke & Co., bankers, No. 33 S. Third street, kindly offered to act as receivers for the Company, and it is with pleasure that we are able to state that the plan is meeting with that success so well deserved. The shares, selling at one dollar each, are going off rapidly. Each share, it will be remembered, not only secures at the time of purchase a beautiful steel-plate engraving, but guarantees one of the $300,000 worth of presents to be distributed next month. Let all call or send to the principal office, No. 1225 Chesnut street, and obtain a pamphlet setting forth in full the aim and object of the Washington Library Company, together with the benefit accruing to those who aid in this great charity.

Some eighteen mouths since, I was a severe sufferer from dyspecsia. I was not only unable to take plain food without suffering great distress, but had become so debilitated as to be almost unfitted for active business of any kind.

After trying a variety of so-called remedies, all of which proved worthless, I was induced, at the suggestion of a medical triend, to give Hoofland's German Bitters a trial. I accordingly purchased six bottles, which were taken in accordance with your irrections.

The result was a complete removal of all distress

The result was a complete removal of all distressing symptoms after eating or drinking, and a full restoration of strength, so that I now est all ordinary kinds of food with impunity, and am able to attend to all the active duties of a large and arduous business as well as at any period of my tire; the good effects of the Bitters were manifested before I had taken the first bottle.

I have also used it in my family with the happles results, and take great pleasure in adding my lests mony to that of the many others who have been benefited by it. I find great benefit from the use of a bottle in the spring and fail. They not only create a vigorous appetite, but give a healthy tone to the stomach by strengthening its digestive powers.

Maximilian in Captivity at Querctaro-Baron Lago's Official Report.

From the Vienna Official Abendpost, August 3. The fellowing despatch from Baron Lago, the Austrian Minister in Mexico, dated Mexico, June 25, with a postscript of June 28, contains an interesting and authentic account of the captivity of Maximilian at Querciaro: - of Maximilian at Querelaro:

After overcoming the great difficulties laid in my way by the Lugarteniente-General Marquez, I succeeded in leaving Mexico on the 31st of May, and arrived, after a three days' journey via Tuloca and Celaya, at Queretaro on the night of the 3d of June. The day after I received permission from the Republican Commander-in-Chief, General Escobedo, to visit the Emperor whenever I pleased. I immediately went to the prison in the Convento de las Capuchinas, where I found his Majesty in bed suffering severely from dysentery, but full of mental vigor and courageous resolution. On the stairs and corridors leading to the chamber of his Majesty hundreds of soldiers were lying about, so that one had literally to step over them. The chamber itself was a cell at the end of a corridor on the first floor about ten paces long and six wide, and contained nothing but a campbed, a chest, two tables, an arm-chair, and four other chairs made of reeds; the floor was of common brick, the door and only window opened into the passage. Before the one stood a sentinel, before the other an officer lay on a straw mat. At night a general and three colonels stood sentinel before the imperial chamber with revolvers in their hands. On the same corridor Emperor to the Austrian officers in Mexico, and communicated to them that an autograph letter from His Majesty, desiring them to avoid all further shedding of blood, had been sent to them by M. Magnus, but had probably been intercepted by General Marquez, and that they must now, therefore, consider themselves responsible to his Majesty the Emperor of Australian and the statement of the statement of Australian and Australian a tria for the life of every Austrian soldier that should hereafter be uselessly sacrificed. I also offered to meet Colonel Count Khevenhuller between the trenches at night time, and by a personal interview to convince him of the aupersonal interview to convince him of the authenticity of the news from Queretaro. At the same time I put myself in personal communication with the Republican General in Chief, Porfire Dias. oation with the Republican General-In-Chief, Porfirio Diaz, in order to obtain favorable conditions for the Austrian troops.

What follows in the despatch of Baron Lago is already well known. Mexico capitulated, but the Minister had succeeded in obtaining favorable terms for his countrymen, and the Austrian troops, to the number of 150 officers and 50 to 600 men from Mexico, and 17 officers and 50 to 60 men from Queretaro, are now on their way home. The Austrians who had been their way home. From the time of my arrival at Queretaro I was in daily communication for hours together with the Emperor, who treated me most graciously and kindly, and gave me every proof of his entire confidence. His Majesty also frequently saw my colleagues, the Prussian Minister, and the Beigian and Italian Charges d'Affaires, MM. Hooriks and Curtopassi, to whom he also showed himself most amiable at digracious. consequence of the disobedience of General Marquez, who never sent one courier nor one centavo to Quereiaro. After the return of Gen. Marquez had been vainly expected for some weeks, and after many invariably successful partial engagements with an enemy six times as numerous as his own army, it had been reserved to give up Quereiaro and to march upon Mexico. On the 16th of May the march was to have commenced in the morning, but at 3 o'clock the traitor Lopes—Colonel of the cavalry regiment De la Emperairia, and in command at the fortified Convento de la Cruz, the key of the position at Quereiaro—surrendered his post to the enemy. The Emperor told me, also, that he had taken some cavalry to the fortified hill on the west side of the town—tae Cerro de la Campana—with the intention of railying his troops. There he had walted for General Miramon, who had, however, in the meantime, been badly wounded in the face and taken prisoner. Thus the valuable time that might have sufficed to enable them to cut their way through the enemy was uselessly lost. When the Emperor heard of the fate of Miramon it was too late to think of escape.
